

STAGE 2 OF 4

In or out

2 IN 1 OUT 2 IN IF…

PITCH | IN OR OUT | COUNTEROFFERS | THE DEAL

Advocate THE PITCH

Narrow it. Not "a bracelet for autistic kids": a tap-to-read tag sold to ABA clinics, who hand it to parents at intake. Clinics already buy ID lanyards at $8–12 each, and parents trust what the clinic gives them. Leave the consumer launch for later.

clinic supply catalog | 2 parent forums

Investor I'M IN

Clinics are a channel you can actually walk into. Twelve clinics at 30 tags a year is a real number, and it repeats.

Moved from off track: the Pitch gave it a channel.

clinic supply catalog

Strategist I'M OUT

A clinic can print a QR sticker for free today. Until the tag does something a sticker can't, "made for autism" is a label, not a reason to switch.

2 NFC ID competitors

QR sticker pricing

You stepped in LIVED

"Parents at my clinic lose the QR cards in a week. A bracelet stays on."

Skeptic IN, IF…

That's one clinic's experience and it's yours, so it counts for more than a forum post. I'm in if two other clinics say the same thing unprompted.

your interjection

Builder is thinking...

PLUS · $0.21 SO FAR 1 STEP-IN LEFT THIS STAGE

Step in...

WORTH A FIGHT

It's crowded, but here's your opening.

A tap-to-read tag, sold to ABA clinics, handed to parents at intake.

The best version the panel can defend. Every line shows who said it and what it rests on.

WHO

ABA clinics, who already buy ID lanyards for every new family.

clinic supply catalog

WHAT

An NFC tag on a soft band plus one profile page the parent edits. Buildable in a weekend.

tag supplier listing

WHY

Printed cards get lost within a week; a band stays on. Your clinic's experience, not yet confirmed elsewhere.

your interjection · 2 parent forums

THE WEDGE

Clinic-issued, clinic-branded. Competitors sell to parents one at a time; nobody sells through the clinic.

2 NFC ID competitors

WHAT THIS VERSION LEAVES OUT

Selling directly to parents online (crowded, no channel). A custom bracelet design (a soft band with an off-the-shelf tag is enough to test).

70 · 28 · $900–2.4k / mo est.

Potential · How sure we are · From clinic supply prices

YOUR TEST — BUILT FOR YOU

Ask three clinic directors how they handle a lost ID card today. If two say it's a weekly problem, publish the test page.

Riskiest assumption: that two other clinics see what yours sees. If wrong, this is a one-clinic product.

Three director questions, fillable — READY

Test page · hunch.page/clinic-tag — DRAFTED · REVIEW

STILL OUT

"A clinic can print a QR sticker for free. I'm out until the tag does something a sticker can't."

YOUR QUESTION, NOT THE PANEL'S

Is this the right use of your life right now?

> "Serve people who are struggling. Fair exchange, always. Nothing that costs my family or my faith. A home before 30."

Yes · Not now

TAKE THE DEAL

The Deal
Clinic-issued tag · starts with 3 director calls →

My original
A bracelet sold to parents · starts with 5 parent