A website retainer for Texas RV parks

> "Most of these parks have a Facebook page and nothing else. What if I did a cheap site plus a monthly fee to keep it current, and sold it park to park along I-45?"

Recurring web-care subscription for independent RV parks, sold in person along one highway corridor. Uses existing client work as proof.

CRITERIA · THE MOM TEST, BLUE OCEAN, $100M OFFERS

Problem reality — 4
Two owners showed me their Facebook-only setup

Demand evidence — 2
Compliments only. Nobody has given time or money

Differentiation — 3
Three competitors found; all one-off builds

Offer strength — 4
Clear outcome, but the wait is untested

Distribution — 4
In-person corridor; one existing client

Feasibility — 5
Built two of these already

EVIDENCE LADDER · DEMAND — RUNG 1 OF 5

5 People came back: renewed, referred, reused.

4 People gave money: a deposit, a paid pilot.

3 People gave time: an interview, a signup, a reply.

2 People described the problem unprompted, or pay for a workaround.

1 People said it is a good idea. Worth zero.

0 I think it is good.

Three park owners said it's a good idea. That scores zero: compliments aren't demand. Rung 3 needs someone to give you time, like an interview or a reply to outreach.

RISKIEST ASSUMPTION

That a park owner will pay monthly for a site they don't check themselves.

The Investor and the Strategist will each answer it, citing what was found.

Medical IDs get ignored because they look like jewelry. A band that says "tap me" on it is the difference.
